

THE POWER OF YOUR NARRATIVE

Goals:

To provide a creative after school learning environment to work alongside other young people to explore BIPOC history, develop new skills, and build confidence in themselves through the use of art. Participants will delve into the historiographies of how Black and Brown narratives have been shaped and how they are recorded and remembered in the US. The youth will be equipped with various mediums and storytelling tools to develop their own narratives about themselves, their family and community

Outcomes

- To be able to express oneself using art
- To be able to collaborate with other youth
- To be able to plan and conceptualize complex projects
- To be able to think critically about social problems
- To be confident in their work as artists
- Complete visual art project
- Participate in art gallery

Objectives

- To develop technical skills including in photography, painting, printmaking, and writing.
- To nurture conceptual understanding and importance of visual storytelling.
- To facilitate collaborative learning through the exploration of intersecting identities.
- To foster resilience through creative expression and self-advocacy.
- To provide a creative space for learning with and from one another.
